Introduction

We are committed to having a workplace which is free from harassment and bullying. Also, to make sure that all employees, members, Trustees and others who come into contact with us in the course of our work, are treated with dignity and respect. This is without regard to gender, sexual orientation, transgender status, marital or family status, colour, race, nationality, ethnic or national origins, creed, culture, religion or belief, age, or disability.

Striving to make sure that the work environment is free of harassment and bullying and that everyone is treated with dignity and respect is central to ensuring equal opportunities in employment.

This policy and procedure is intended to support this commitment in practice and to provide guidance to employees on how to deal with concerns of bullying or harassment.

Policy

We will not tolerate bullying or harassment in our workplace or at work-related events outside of the workplace. This is regardless of whether the conduct is a one-off act or repeated course of conduct, and whether done purposefully or not.

Neither will we tolerate retaliation against, or victimisation of, any person involved in bringing a complaint of harassment or bullying. Retaliation or victimisation will also constitute a disciplinary offence, which may in appropriate circumstances lead to dismissal.

You should also be aware that if a court or tribunal finds that you have bullied or harassed someone, in some circumstances the treatment may amount to a crime punishable by a fine or imprisonment.

We will take appropriate action if any of our employees, members, Trustees and others are bullied or harassed by our stakeholders or suppliers.

Processes/procedures

Allegations of bullying and harassment will be treated seriously. Investigations will be carried out promptly, sensitively and, as far as possible, confidentially. If, after an investigation, we decide that an employee has harassed or bullied another employee, member, Trustee or other person associated with the organisation, then the employee may be subject to disciplinary action, up to and including dismissal in line with our Disciplinary Policy.

If, after an investigation, we decide that a Trustee or member has harassed or bullied another employee, member, Trustee or other person associated with the organisation, then they may be subject to the procedures set out in the By-Laws. There are additional Code of Conduct By-Laws for members and Trustees.

Employees and others who make allegations of bullying or harassment in good faith will not be treated less favourably as a result. False accusations of harassment or bullying can have a serious effect on innocent individuals. Staff and others have a responsibility not to make false allegations. False allegations made in bad faith will be dealt with under our disciplinary procedures.

The type of treatment that amounts to bullying or harassment

Bullying or harassment is something that has happened that is unwelcome, unwarranted and causes a detrimental effect. If employees complain they are being bullied or harassed, then they have a grievance which must be dealt with regardless of whether or not their complaint accords with a standard definition. For further information, please refer to ACAS' guidance.

It is important to recognise that conduct which one person may find acceptable, another may find totally unacceptable. All employees must, therefore, treat their colleagues with respect and appropriate sensitivity.

Bullying does not include appropriate criticism of an employee's behaviour or proper performance management.

BELMAS recognises individual's rights freedom of speech, which is outlined within the Constitution. We remind our employees, Trustees and members that "being offended" by a person's opinion and freedom of expression, is not the same as bullying and/or harassment.

Reporting concerns

What you should do if you witness an incident you believe to harassment or bullying

If you witness such behaviour, you should report the incident in confidence to the Executive Officer (or in the case of the Executive Officer, the Chair of the Board). Such reports will be taken seriously and will be treated in strict confidence as far as it is possible to do so.

What you should do if you feel you are being bullied or harassed by an external stakeholder or supplier (as opposed to a BELMAS colleague)

If you are being bullied or harassed by someone with whom you come into contact at work, please raise this with your manager in the first instance or, with the Executive Officer, who will then decide how best to deal with the situation, in consultation with you.

What you should do if you are being bullied or harassed by a colleague, Trustee or member

If you are being bullied or harassed by another employee, Trustee or member, there are two possible avenues for you, informal or formal.

Informal resolution

If you are being bullied or harassed by another employee or contractor, you may be able to resolve the situation yourself by explaining clearly to the perpetrator(s) that their behaviour is unacceptable, contrary to our policy and must stop. Alternatively, you may wish to ask the Executive Officer (or in the case of the Executive Officer, the Chair of the Board) or another colleague to put this on your behalf or to be with you when confronting the perpetrator(s).

If the above approach does not work or if you do not want to try to resolve the situation in this way, you should raise the issue with the Executive Officer (or in the case of the executive Officer, the Chair of the Board). They will discuss with you the option of trying to resolve the situation informally by telling the alleged perpetrator(s), without prejudging the matter, that:

- there has been a complaint that their behaviour is having an adverse effect on an employee.
- such behaviour is contrary to our policy.
- the continuation of such behaviour could amount to a serious disciplinary offence.

It may be possible for the Executive Officer or the Chair of the Board to have this conversation with the alleged perpetrator without revealing your name, if this is what you want. They will also stress that the conversation is confidential.

In certain circumstances we may be able to involve a neutral third party (a mediator) to facilitate a resolution of the problem. The Executive Officer or Chair of the Board will discuss this with you if it is appropriate.

If your complaint is resolved informally, the alleged perpetrator(s) will not usually be subject to disciplinary sanctions. However, in exceptional circumstances (such as a serious allegation of sexual or racial harassment or in cases where a problem has happened before) we may decide to investigate further and take more formal action notwithstanding that you raised the matter informally. We will consult with you before taking this step.

Raising a formal complaint

If informal resolution is unsuccessful or inappropriate, you can make a formal complaint about the harassment or bullying to Executive Officer (or in the case of the executive Officer, the Chair of the Board) using the processes and procedures outlined on page 2, under “Processes/procedures”.

A formal complaint may ultimately lead to disciplinary action against the perpetrator(s) as outlined within their respective policies.

The alleged perpetrator(s) would need to be told your name and the details of your complaint in order for the issue to be investigated properly. However, we will carry out the investigation as confidentially and sensitively as possible. Where you and the alleged perpetrator(s) work in proximity to each other, we will consider whether it is appropriate to separate you whilst the matter is being investigated.

Disclosure and confidentiality

We will treat personal data collected during this process in accordance with the data protection policy. Information about how employees' data is used and the basis for processing data is provided in the employee privacy notice.

Use of the disciplinary procedure

Harassment and bullying constitute serious misconduct. If, at any stage from the point at which a complaint is raised, we believe there is a case to answer and a disciplinary offence might have been committed, we will instigate our disciplinary procedure. Any employee found to have harassed or bullied a colleague will be liable to disciplinary action up to and including summary dismissal.
